Very good Sean.

Have you communicated this to Tom and Marty? I'm not sure they have all the info you have that led to any recent decisions.

Dear Mike,

I am taking the liberty of e-mailing you because today is a state holiday and I assume your support staff is not working and so I could not be able to call you. I drafted most of this message before getting the order just issued by the court which orders us to do what I suggest below.

This message is motivated by the filing you faxed to us at 4:08 pm last evening. As you can imagine my clients are very disappointed that the Lieutenant Governor has decided that he cannot comply with the court order.

My clients believe that by a) delaying the decision to not certify the initiative until virtually the last day of the 60 days allowed, b) refusing to agree to our proposed time for filing his answer, c) seeking additional time to respond to our motion for summary judgment (which we agreed to) d) taking virtually the entire 60 days to address 07WTR2, e) the ongoing delay in addressing the validity of 07WTR3 which was revised to accommodate the states concerns, f) the failure of the state to object to the five day period we had in our proposed order g) the failure to take any action for two days after the court order was received, and h) the insistence that the petitions cannot be made available until the 29th of this month at the earliest, that the Lt. Governor has deliberately and intentionally delayed any approval of a ballot measure which might be related to large scale mining in Alaska for policy or political reasons. They feel he is trying to keep the people from having the opportunity to vote on such a measure. And they feel at this point that he has admitted he is in contempt of court. They have instructed us to seek an order to show cause and to compel sanctions. They are also exploring other methods to communicate their considerable frustration.

Given the dates on the Division of Elections web page showing that petition books for numerous other initiatives have been provided in much less than 17 days they do not believe that 17 days should be necessary. The specific procedures outlined in the statutes and regulations do not require that much time. The drafting of a summary and the preparation of a cost estimate should not take long. While petition books have to be printed we believe that would it would not take 5 calendar days to get those printed. Indeed experts in printing we have consulted with think that numerous print shops could produce at least 100 booklets overnight. And I note that the rules permit the applicants to pay for additional booklets to be printed if they think the Lt. Gov. has not provided enough.

I am contacting you to explore the possibility of resolving this short of us asking the court to hold Mr.. Parnell in contempt and that significant fines and other sanctions be imposed.

It would seem that with a few hours of concentrated effort by the Division of Elections, the summary and the cost estimate could be completed. The layout of the booklet should take only a few more hours. Printing could be started and the first several hundred booklets should be available within in a day after that. Alternatively perhaps agreement could be reached on interim booklets that could be copied on copy machines and could be used to gather signatures before the final booklets are printed. It does not seem that we need to engage in a huge legal battle if a bit of cooperation could resolve the timing issues. It may require a bit of flexibility on the part of the state and officials of the Division of Elections. But it does not appear that there are specific time frames in statute or other similar legal requirements that must be observed at the risk of challenges from others.

In short I urge you in the strongest possible terms to get with your client and his staff in the Division of Elections and come up with a way that can accelerate this process and avoid the delay which you are now proposing and which is unacceptable to my clients. My clients may even be willing to help cover some of the costs if it means they do not have to pay me to pursue expensive litigation against the state.

Can I hear from you no later than 10 am tomorrow? If we do not have a solution in place by noon tomorrow or very significant progress towards a solution, I am instructed to file a motion for order to show cause and to ask for significant financial and other sanctions.

In short I urge you in the strongest possible terms to get with your client and his staff in the Division of Elections and come up with a way that can accelerate this process and avoid the delay which you are now proposing and which is unacceptable to my clients. My clients may even be willing to help cover some of the costs if it means they do not have to pay me to pursue expensive litigation against the state.

Can I hear from you no later than 10 am tomorrow? If we do not have a solution in place by noon tomorrow or very significant progress towards a solution, I am instructed to file a motion for order to show cause and to ask for significant financial and other sanctions.

It's just unbelievable though that Jay chooses to be so disrespectful to Pat. And as Jay feeds Fagan and others I have to pray that people have their eyes wide open to the deception he spews.

I just lost any respect that I might have had for Jay no matter how little that was. I am struggling with the thought of telling him that after the session. Please don't let these type of people affect you. We appreciate you and Alaskans just got another example to see the difference between ugly politics and doing the job right. Tom

Subject: Holman et. al. v Parnell

Dear Mike,

I am taking the liberty of e-mailing you because today is a state holiday and I assume your support staff is not working and so I could not be able to call you. I drafted most of this message before getting the order just issued by the court which orders us to do what I suggest below.

This message is motivated by the filing you faxed to us at 4:08 pm last evening. As you can imagine my clients are very disappointed that the Lieutenant Governor has decided that he cannot comply with the court order.

My clients believe that by a) delaying the decision to not certify the initiative until virtually the last day of the 60 days allowed, b) refusing to agree to our proposed time for filing his answer, c) seeking additional time to respond to our motion for summary judgment (which we agreed to) d) taking virtually the entire 60 days to address 07WTR2, e) the ongoing delay in addressing the validity of 07WTR3 which was revised to accommodate the states concerns, f) the failure of the state to object to the five day period we had in our proposed order g) the failure to take any action for two days after the court order was received, and h) the insistence that the petitions cannot be made available until the 29th of this month at the earliest, that the Lt. Governor has deliberately and intentionally delayed any approval of a ballot measure which might be related to large scale mining in Alaska for policy or political reasons. They feel he is trying to keep the people from having the opportunity to vote on such a measure. And they feel at this point that he has admitted he is in contempt of court. They have instructed us to seek an order to show cause and to compel sanctions. They are also exploring other methods to communicate their considerable frustration.

Given the dates on the Division of Elections web page showing that petition books for numerous other initiatives have been provided in much less than 17 days they do not believe that 17 days should be necessary. The specific procedures outlined in the statutes and regulations do not require that much time. The drafting of a summary and the preparation of a cost estimate should not take long. While petition books have to be printed we believe that would it would not take 5 calendar days to get those printed. Indeed experts in printing we have consulted with think that numerous print shops could produce at least 100 booklets overnight. And I note that the rules permit the applicants to pay for additional booklets to be printed if they think the Lt. Gov. has not provided enough.

I am contacting you to explore the possibility of resolving this short of us asking the court to hold Mr.. Parnell in contempt and that significant fines and other sanctions be imposed.

It would seem that with a few hours of concentrated effort by the Division of Elections, the summary and the cost estimate could be completed. The layout of the booklet should take only a few more hours. Printing could be started and the first several hundred booklets should be available within in a day after that. Alternatively perhaps agreement could be reached on interim booklets that could be copied on copy machines and could be used to gather signatures before the final booklets are printed. It does not seem that we need to engage in a huge legal battle if a bit of cooperation could resolve the timing issues. It may require a bit of flexibility on the part of the state and officials of the Division of Elections. But it does not appear that there are specific time frames in statute or other similar legal requirements that must be observed at the risk of challenges from others.

In short I urge you in the strongest possible terms to get with your client and his staff in the Division of Elections and come up with a way that can accelerate this process and avoid the delay which you are now proposing and which is unacceptable to my clients. My clients may even be willing to help cover some of the costs if it means they do not have to pay me to pursue expensive litigation against the state.

Can I hear from you no later than 10 am tomorrow? If we do not have a solution in place by noon tomorrow or very significant progress towards a solution, I am instructed to file a motion for order to show cause and to ask for significant financial and other sanctions.

Jay was opposed to ppt before and threatening to closely monitor oil industry shenanigans - wonder what happened the past few months to twist all that around.

Off the record...

One of our friendly reporters has been listening to the house floor sessions on ppt during the murk administration where ramras was opposed to the ppt they were voting on and disgusted by the oil lobbyists he saw marching up to the gov's office. And he vowed that if he was tricked by the industry and their lobbyists when it came to this important tax policy then he would come back to jnu angry and pounding on the table demanding answers. Now today he says he doesn't know why he's here and doesn't think there is anything wrong w ppt! What a flippin flip-flopper! What happened to the accountability in what you say and do?!? If this doesn't come out in a story (which I think it will) than I'm making sure it comes out in a letter to the editor.

Subject: Tea Honoring First Lady of Mongolia Mrs. Onon

Honorable Sarah Palin:

I realize this is very short notice, however AIEF just found out about the Mongolian delegation's schedule from their Washington D.C. Embassy.

I just know you would enjoy meeting the members of the Board that run this Foundation and the residents from Mongolia who live in the residence operated by the Foundation. Realizing your focus on the PPT in Juneau at this time and of course the narrow calendaring window I do understand should you not be able to attend.

Two students from Mongolia have lived at the residence of Irma Scavenius, a former teacher in Anchorage who left all her property in Homer and her home in Anchorage to international educational exchange and to further understanding between Alaskans and those of other nations. I am also faxing copy of our grant/scholarship application and housing application/House Rules for your information/files.

AIEF recently funded the award winning UAA Seawolf Debate Team to travel to British Columbia in 2006 to compete in international competition as well as to Beijing, China to judge competitions in May 2007, funded a trip to Paris for Aleut Corporation members and an Anchorage Anthropologist to document Aleut masks taken from a cave on Attu Island in the late 1800's; and helped bring the Chukoma Taiko drummers to Alaska in 2005.

The Board of Directors would be honored if you could attend the Tea honoring the First Lady of Mongolia. I am, of course, following up with a written invitation. Thank you, Governor Palin, for considering the Board's invitation on such short notice. And best of luck at the special session.

Alaska International Education Foundation, Inc.

is pleased to host

Tea / hors d' oeuvres at the Captain Cook Hotel for

- The First Lady of Mongolia, Mrs. Onon Tsolmon
- H.E. Tumur-Ochir, Deputy Minister of Education
- Mrs. Oyuun, Ambassador's spouse
- Mr. Dawaadash, Education Officer of the Embassy of Mongolia (a translator)
- Ms. Altan, Aide to the First Lady

Friday, October 26, 2007 4:00 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

given the dates on the Division of Elections web page showing that petition books for numerous other initiatives have been provided in much less than 17 days they do not believe that 17 days should be necessary. The specific procedure outlined in the statutes and regulations do not require that much time. The drafting of a summary and the preparation of a cost estimate should take long, while petition books have to be submitted to the appropriate authority to take 5 calendar days to get those prepared. Indeed experts in printing we have consulted with think that numerous printing shops could produce at least 100 booklets to be printed if they think the IC, Gov. has not provided to pay for additional booklets to be printed if they think the IC, Gov. has not provided enough.

Exploring other methods to communicate their consideration, they are also instructed us to seek an order to show cause and to compel sanctions. They have tried at this point that he has admitted he is in contempt of court. They have tried to keep the people from having the opportunity to vote on such a measure. And is related to large scale mailing in Alaska for poltical reasons. They feel he be available until the 28th of this month at the earliest, that the petition has been submitted to the court recently delayed a ballot measure which might be accommodated to our proposed order, and by the insistence that the petition books be filed we had in our proposed order, g) the failure to take any action for two days after the court order was received, and h) the failure of the state to object to the five day accommodation the states concerns, e) the failure of the state to object to the ongoing delay in addressing the validity of our which was revised to j) finding virtually the entire 60 days to address our summary for filing his answer, c) seeking additional time to respond to our motion for summary for filing the last day of the 60 days allowed, b) refusing to agree to our proposed time virtually the last day of the 60 days allowed, a) delaying the election to not certify the initiative until

This message is motivated by the filing you faxed to us at 4:08 pm last evening. As you can imagine my clients are very disappointed that the Lieutenant Governor has decided that he cannot comply with the court order.

I am taking the liberty of e-mailing you because today is a state holiday and I assume your support staff is not working and so I could not be able to call you. I drafted most of this message before getting the order just issued by the court which orders us to do what I suggest below.

DISCLAIMER:

Can I hear from you no later than 10 am tomorrow? If we do not have a solution in place by noon tomorrow or very significant progress towards a solution, I am instructed to file a motion for order to show cause and to ask for significant financial and other sanctions.

In short I urge you in the strongest possible terms to get with your client and his staff to pay me to pursue expensive litigation against the state, clients may even be willing to help cover some of the costs if it means they do not have avoided the delay which you are now proposing and which is unacceptable to my clients. My issues, it may require a bit of flexibility on the part of the state and officials of the division of elections and come up with a way that can accelerate this process and need to engage in a huge legal battle if a bit of cooperation could resolve the timing ...

It would seem that within a few hours of concentrated effort by the division of elections, the summary and the cost estimate could be completed. The layout of the booklet should take only a few more hours. Printing could be started and the first several should be reached on interim booklets that could be copied on copy machines and could be used to gather signatures before the final booklets are printed. It does not seem that we need to engage in a huge legal battle if a bit of cooperation could resolve the timing ...

It would seem that a few hours of concentrated effort by the division of elections, the layout of the booklet should be available within a day after that. Alternatively perhaps agreements could be reached on interim booklets that could be copied on copy machines and could be used to gather signatures before the final booklets are printed. It does not seem that we need to engage in a huge legal battle if a bit of cooperation could resolve the timing ...

I am contacting you to explore the possibility of resolving this short of us asking the court to hold Mr. ... Parallel in contempt and that significant fine and other sanctions be imposed.

Privileged or Personal Material Redacted

I am contacting you to explore the possibility of resolving this short of us asking the court to hold Mr. ... Partee in contempt and that significant fines and other sanctions be imposed.

Given the dates on the Division of Elections web page showing that petition books for numerous other entities have been provided in much less than 17 days they do not believe that 17 days should be necessary. The specific procedure outlined in the statutes and regulations do not require that much time. The drafting of a summary and the preparation of a cost estimate should take long, while petition books have to be prepared we believe that would not take 5 calendar days to get those printed. I need experts in printing we have consulted if they think the Lt. Gov. has not provided to pay for additional books to be printed if they think the Lt. Gov. has not provided produce at least 100 books over night. And I note that the rules permit the application of fines and other sanctions to be imposed if they think the Lt. Gov. has not provided enough.

Exploring other methods to communicate their considerable frustration, they are also instructed us to seek an order to show cause and to compel sanctions. They have been trying to keep the people from having the opportunity to vote on such a measure. And they feel at this point that he has admitted he is in contempt of court, they have been trying to keep large scale mailing in Alaska for polity or political reasons. They feel he be released until the 29th of this month at the earliest, that the Lt. Governor has delayed unduly and internally delayed any approval of a ballot measure which might be court order was received, and by the earliest, take the petitioners action after period we had in our proposed order (g) the failure to the state to object to the five day accommodation the states concerns, (f) the failure of the state to object to the ongoing delay in addressing the validity of 07WTR which was issued to (e) the filing its answer, (which we agreed to) seeking additional time to respond to our motion for summary judgment (which we agreed to) seeking additional time to agree to our proposed time virtually the last day of the 60 days allowed, (b) requesting to the legislative unit to My clients believe that by a) delaying the decision to not certify the legislative unit

This message is motivated by the filing you faxed to us at 4:08 pm last evening. As you can imagine my clients are very disappointed that the Lieutenant Governor has decided that he cannot comply with the court order.

I am taking the liberty of e-mailing you because today is a state holiday and I assume that this message before getting the order just issued by the court which orders us to do what I suggest below.

Your support staff is not working and so I could not be able to call you. I drafted most of this message before getting the order just issued by the court which orders us to do what I suggest below.

DISCLAIMER:

Can I hear from you no later than 10 am tomorrow? If we do not have a solution in place by noon tomorrow or very significantly progress towards a solution, I am instructed to file a motion for order to show cause and to ask for injunctive relief and other sanctions.

IN short I urge you to take the strongest possible terms to get with your clients and this staff in the division of election and come up with a way that can accelerate this process and avoid the delay which you are now proposing and which is unacceptable to my clients. My clients may even be willing to help cover some of the costs if it means they do not have to pay me to pursue expensive litigation against the state.

It would seem that with a few hours of concentrated effort by the Division of Elections, the summary and the cost estimate could be completed. The layout of the booklet should take only a few more hours, printing could be started and the first several hundred booklets should be ready on time. Intermediate booklets that could be copied machines and could be used to gather signatures before the final booklets are printed. It does not seem that we need to engage in a huge legal battle if a bit of cooperation could resolve the timing issues. It may require a bit of flexibility on the part of the state and officials of the Division of Elections. But it does not appear that there are specific time frames in the statute or other similar legal requirements that must be observed at the risk of challenging from others.

October, 20, 2007

Dear Governor Palin:

Thank you for having the legislature address PPT once again. I agree with many Alaskans that there is a cloud of uncertainty that hangs over what was passed earlier. I don't think all of the legislators were co-opted by improper influence but it is clear that some were.

Also, pushing for more revenue when oil prices are high makes economic sense to me. I don't know what other politicians mean when they say we need to get our "fair share". That is a political cliche that makes no sense unless you define "fair share" as you have in your proposed legislation.

Will the oil companies leave if we get a greater share of the value of our oil? Let them leave because there will be a host of other producers that will line up to take over in a Nushagak heartbeat.

I hope that you will be successful and that some of our extra earnings from high oil prices will be used to help our villages survive $6 a gallon heating oil and $5 a gallon gasoline.

The following suggestions are needed very soon to save our villages from closing down their municipal offices, closing more schools, and prevent more people from becoming energy refugees because of high cost energy.

I have proposed in earlier communications with your office that a sales tax waiver program be considered that will allow municipalities to waive the sale tax on heating fuel, gasoline, and electricity and have the state reimburse the communities that adopt the sales tax waiver program. This proposed program should have a three year sunset clause for review in the event a low cost energy program is found that is helping to lower the cost of energy.

A second proposal has been a State-Wide Fuel Coop that would take State Royalty Oil and have it refined in Alaska and have the refined products distributed via our traditional delivery system we currently use.

I believe that if all of our communities are beneficiaries of this proposal that sufficient political support can be found to make it happen.

Further, we should fund the ANGDA proposal to test the use of propane as an alternative fuel to diesel in our villages. I believe that ANGDA asked for $5 million for a test program last year but I am not sure that they were successful in acquiring that funding.

Finally, we do need an Energy Czar that can focus on our need to adopt and implement an Alaska Energy Policy that will make Alaska energy self-sufficient by 2025. IF there is one person that has the full support of the Governor, I believe that we will get to on a path to energy self-sufficiency much earlier than 2025.

Dorothy and I wish you success in your efforts to clear the air on PPT.

Best regards,

Nels and Dorothy Anderson

Kara Moriarty's speech to Juneau Chamber of Commerce

From: Nels Anderson (dorothyann1936@hotmail.com)

October 19, 2007

Dear Editor:

These are my comments on Alaska Oil and Gas Association's Kara Moriarty's speech to the Juneau Chamber of Commerce touting "Jobs not Taxes." It has been well known for many years that many Rural Alaskans did not get many of the jobs on building the oil pipeline. That has not changed over the years. Very few minorities work on the North Slope now.

Many jobs are held by outsiders and they commute from as far away as Minnesota and the south. That is not right when you look at a village by village unemployment rate throughout the life of the oil pipeline.

How is the oil industry and the state going to make sure that more jobs go to Alaskans ALL across Alaska?

Finally, how much money have the oil companies made since the pipeline was paid for? No one ever mentions that and in addition, that is OUR oil, not theirs.

Thank you,

Nels Anderson, Jr.

Governor Palin,

I am taking a few moments to write from Oklahoma - I want to let you know what an inspiration you are! I am fiercely proud to have been born and raised in Alaska. I have always been thankful that the first 20 years of my life were spent in such beauty and diversity. I have followed Alaska news since I left in 1993. (I have to keep up with current events for when I finally move back home!) I knew of you when you were Mayor of Wasilla and was thrilled when you were elected Governor. I admire all you are doing politically, but I really want to compliment you on something that touches my heart on a personal level and that is your support of the Alaskan military members. Your commitment to them is a reflection of your beliefs in this country, your state and your people! I work as a contractor to the Air Force at Altus Air Force Base and am married to a retired aircrew member - our military members mean a lot to me and your commitment to our soldiers always makes me proud.

I have never been more honored to be an Alaskan. I know my home is in great hands.
Wishing you all the best!

Sincerely,

Susan Coles

Thanks for your ferries update Randy. It's very important that the COS travel there too, too hear their concerns. I've asked Janice to schedule that in the next few days. Thanks!

Mike- i'll need you to travel to sitka to meet with the mayor (and any other community leaders) to hear their serious concerns about the ferries. Again, as I explained when Beth and I returned, it was unexpected (and inexcusable) to have been bombarded with the residents' concerns expressed everywhere we went.

It would be good for you to get out and about Alaska anyway! And since it's just a puddle jump over there I ask you (I'll have janice do so) to schedule in the next couple of days a visit to discuss with sitka all of their concerns. (It's ok that their leggies won't be there... Randy and Russ can follow up with leggies.)

There are any issues we can't keep putting off - this is one of them.

Thanks mike, appreciate you doing this and look forward to giving you more opportunities to travel to other areas, as you can tell it's impossible for me to be everywhere at once and you can step in on some of these.. Thanks!

Subject: State employee records

Governor:

After our conversation this morning, I asked Kevin Brooks to provide some information about the authorities for viewing employee records and some history of these types of requests.

AUTHORITIES:

The Commissioner for the Department of Administration (DOA) is responsible for telecommunications for the State. (AS 44.21.305-390) Under this broad authority, requests for access to electronic records generated by State employees on State equipment, come through the Commissioner of DOA.

Each employee signs the "State of Alaska Information Technology and Telecommunication Security Policies" document when hired by the State. The relevant portion of the six-page document is:

IV. POLICY:

1. GENERAL USE AND OWNERSHIP

A. State systems are to be used for state business and as such users of these systems shall not expect any reasonable right to privacy of information stored on or accessed by the systems. All data created on State of Alaska systems or networks remains the property of the State of Alaska. In addition, contents of any computer(s) connected to the state's networks may be subject to records requests.

B. For security and network maintenance purposes, authorized individuals within the State of Alaska may monitor equipment, systems and network traffic at any time.

C. The State of Alaska reserves the right to audit networks and systems to ensure compliance with this policy.

HOW ARE THE REQUESTS GENERATED?

There are generally three ways a request for viewing an employee's electronic records occurs:

- 1) Generated by the Governor, the Governor's Chief of Staff or the Commissioner of DOA.
- 2) Generated by a supervisor, working with the Division of Personnel, where the supervisor suspects an employee is spending time surfing the Internet on State time rather than doing State business. This can also include inappropriate use of State equipment, up to and including downloading pornography.
- 3) By a subpoena or court order involving the Department of Public Safety or the Department of Law.

The Commissioner of DOA would be informed if the request came under 1 or 3, but not necessarily under 2.

My understanding is that your desire from today forward is that only the Governor can sign off on any requests to view employee electronic records generated by a request from the Governor's office or the Commissioner of DOA.

The Division of Personnel receives between 20-40 requests/year for employee investigations involving some sort of reviewing an employee's electronic activities. These requests are sent in writing to the State Security Office under the Division of Personnel Director's authority in AS 39.25.050 and 2 AAC 07.910. Generally these requests are very specific either to dates of activity (where the complaint is inappropriate use of time) or looking for evidence of illegal or inappropriate use – more topic specific searches. There must be some probable cause here, these are not fishing expeditions – even though, as an employer the State has every right to view records generated on State equipment. The request dictates the level of review. DOP employees with access to confidential information must sign an acknowledgment to this effect. Depending on the request:

- 1) the Supervisor would get a report of activity back from the State Security Office;
- 2) the Division of Personnel staff would get a report of activity to share with the supervisor;
- 3) the DOP Staff could be given mirror image access to a computer; or
- 4) most often, the DOP staff are given access to a secure website where the State Security Office has posted relevant information from the employee's computer. The DOP staff use special enhanced tools to view the information.

I don't know if you want to be party to these types of investigations. I normally am not – only if there is likely to be an arrest or if the offense is particularly serious. The Director must sign off on these requests, and therefore there is a requirement that there is a reasonable suspicion of inappropriate use of State equipment. These types of investigations are in the hands of employees trained in human resources. My recommendation would be

Privileged or Personal Material Redacted

As for subpoenas, Darrell has seen several of these since he began working in the Department a little over five years ago. Generally, these are very specific (much like public information requests). Generally, these involve gathering all emails and related documents such as happened in the Alaska Homegrown controversy. He has not seen a court order in the time he has been in his position as State Security Officer.

My recommendation would be Privileged or Personal Material Redacted

Privileged or Personal Material Redacted

Please let me know if you need additional information, if you would like a more formal process than this, or if this just generates more questions.

I'll be in the office 465-5670 until about 3:30 p.m. and then I'll head toward home

If this doesn't come out in a story (which I think it will) than I'm making sure it comes out in a letter to the editor.

Lyn McGee
Joins Center for Women's Business Research
As Director of Marketing and Communications

Washington, DC – The Center for Women's Business Research announced today that Lyn Chamness McGee has joined the Center as director of marketing and communications. She will be the lead executive responsible for communicating the mission and accomplishments of the Center to a variety of audiences. Her first priorities will be enhancing the brand strategy and creating an interactive online presence for the Center.

Prior to joining the Center, McGee was a senior marketing officer at Ashoka; Innovators for the Public, a non-profit international organization that supports entrepreneurs solving social issues through large scale innovations. While in that position, she led their marketing communication strategies and fund raising campaigns.

PRA_GSP01_0006793

"We are looking to Lyn to help us grow to the next level," said Margaret A. Smith, chair, Center for Women's Business Research. "Her wealth of experience in marketing and communications brings a fresh perspective and depth to our existing strategies. We welcome her to our senior staff."

Before joining Ashoka, McGee served as vice president of marketing for Telarix, a firm that uses emerging technologies to deliver call management solutions that make it easier for companies to participate in the global economy.

"It's exciting to work with an organization that is doing so much to advance the economic, social and political impact of women business owners," said Lyn McGee. "It forwards the cause of all women and helps shape a better society."

At MCI Communications, Inc., McGee held several positions over the course of her eleven years progressing from product manager of MCI's virtual voice service to a leadership position in sales where the organization she managed achieved a $15 million revenue goal.

McGee has fifteen years experience in the technology sector and has had a wide range of experiences in various sales and marketing roles. All of her experience has been focused on helping organizations use technology to improve their business operations, reach, and impact.

McGee is an avid outdoor enthusiast and recently completed her second sprint triathlon. She also volunteers in her parish community and as a Boy Scout den leader and a Girl Scout troop leader.

The Organization of American States: On its Deathbed?

COHA - To Our Readers

Unfortunately, an older and unedited version of the COHA piece entitled "The OAS: On its Deathbed?" was inadvertently sent out to a very small cohort of COHA readers on October 17 before an error was discovered and the press run was immediately aborted. Due to a computer editing error, the author, Sean Bartlett did not catch that two different facts were spliced into one sentence. Jose Miguel Insulza, as a young man in his late twenties, was a political director in the Chilean Foreign Ministry under the Allende administration, eventually rising to the rank of foreign minister decades later under the second Frei Administration after returning from exile abroad during the Pinochet dictatorship. (He, of course, was not Chile's foreign minister under Allende as stated in the version that was sent in error). The error has been corrected and the author regrets this mistake.

- Should the OAS be reconstituted with Canada and the US as observer nations, or can the US revise its role as both a leader and an ally that respects its own limitations?
- Sovereign rights are no longer subject
- Latin America needs its freedom and autonomy outside the OAS in order for it to grow

Illness is not usually the equivalence of death. This aphorism is being applied by some to the health of the Organization of American States (OAS), the premiere regional organization and forum for the democratic nations of the Western Hemisphere. As the international political landscape has evolved from the Cold War to the Wars on Drugs and Terror, the United States, the OAS' proverbial elephant, has diverted much of its attention to events occurring outside of the region. Thus, today it almost seems to be a fallacy that as goes the U.S., so goes the OAS. In terms of investment and trade matters this may be a legitimate concern, but the long-term political, economic, and social thrust of the other Western Hemispheric nations does not seem to be adversely affected by a cut-back in U.S. attention to the region. In fact, many of them have thrived, with a number of them welcoming a lesser role for the U.S. because this will allow for pluralism, diversification, and experimentation now that Washington's often heavy hand has been lightened. However, a lesser role that has translated to the U.S.' virtual disappearance concerning hemispheric affairs in the last several years was not originally envisaged. The subsequent result has been a growing number of voices inviting inquiry as to the contemporary relevance of the OAS.

Dear Governor,

You are doing a great job and I really appreciate your service to Alaska. As a follow up to Tom Irwin and Marty Rutherford's earlier email today, I request an opportunity to provide private industry's views of the issues they have outlined and raise the level of urgency to respond to these attacks by Bob Gillam on your administration. Mr. Gillam's all out campaign on one project and the State permitting process has the very real potential to negatively affect not only the Pebble project and mineral resource development in general, but also future resource development on federal, state and ANCSA lands including oil and gas activities in Bristol Bay.

Although I apologize for contacting you over the weekend, these are very important issues that require immediate attention and a response from you. If I could have just a few moments of your time for a phone conversation to further appraise you of the situation, industry's view of your priorities, and the short timeline to respond in order to turn the tide, it would allow me to help you and the State. I can be reached directly at (907) 952-6062 or if one of your staff could leave a call back number and a convenient time for me to call it would be greatly appreciated. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Bill Jeffress

Governor-

At issue is the lawsuit over the Alaskan Grown logo. State claims ownership of the logo - the Mat-Su chapter of the Alaska Farm Bureau tried to get a federal patent for it. Here is an article and an editorial from the Frontiersman that gives the history.

The question is at the heart of a lawsuit between the Alaska Department of Agriculture and the Mat-Su Chapter of the Alaska Farm Bureau. In a court decision handed down Monday, a judge found the state would suffer irreparable harm if the Mat-Su chapter proceeded with its attempt to get a federal trademark on the Alaska Grown logo.

The lawsuit began in February 2006 and this week's injunction came just days before the Alaska State Fair, where the Mat-Su Chapter of the Alaska Farm Bureau has a booth selling items emblazoned with the Alaska Grown logo.

The Alaska Grown program was started in 1986, according to the Alaska Grown Web site. Its logo was a creation of the Alaska Division of Agriculture and the Alaska Farmers and Stockgrowers Association. The Stockgrowers Association became the Alaska Farm Bureau. The logo is both a marketing tool and a certification mark that indicates food bearing the logo is produced by farmers who are a part of the program. Sweatshirts and stickers with the logo are marketing tools and so are not required to be produced in Alaska.

The farm marketing industry in Alaska is a $52 million business and Assistant Attorney General Steven Ross said that historically the state has allowed nonprofit farm organizations to use the logo for promotional purposes. The logo is used primarily on clothing the organizations sell and use for fundraising.

The state's position is that the state owns the Alaska Grown logo, Ross said. That means the Mat-Su Farm Bureau chapter cannot trademark what the state owns.

"It is a symbol of the Alaska Grown Program," Ross said, adding the Alaska Grown system was in place for nearly 20 years without problem.

Ross said the issue began in 2005 when the Mat-Su chapter tried to register the logo with the federal patent office.

The state asked representatives of the Mat-Su chapter to withdraw the federal trademark attempt and the Mat-Su Chapter refused, Ross said. The logo is registered with the state, but not at the federal level. If the Mat-Su federally trademarked the logo the state could loose control of how the logo is used.

"The state has rights in that logo and it has to protect the other people involved in the Alaska Grown program," Ross said.

The state has terminated the right for the Mat-Su Chapter to use the Alaska Grown logo and Monday's court finding grants a motion for injunctive relief, which is what the state requested, Ross said.

Politicians play dodgeball as ag industry bleeds

Published on Thursday, October 11, 2007 10:00 PM AKDT

The state and Mat-Su Chapter of the Alaska Farm Bureau seem no closer to settling a lawsuit hobbling an already shaky agriculture industry.

The Alaska Grown logo - the familiar, friendly green, yellow and blue emblem - should be fused to a large playground ball as every politician in the state is playing dodgeball with it.

The issue is ownership of the logo - who can use and profit from its use.

Advertisement

Few people outside the ag industry seem to understand the fierce tug-of-war over the logo. It's not surprising. There's been plenty of misinformation and accusations flying around.

There is also some agreement.

In the 1980s, a group of Alaska farmers and ranchers, and employees from various state and federal agencies, met to brainstorm ways to promote Alaska agriculture. Out of that meeting came the Alaska Grown logo, trademarked in 1985.

The agreement ends there.

Some say the state was chosen as caretaker of the logo. It was the state's job to ensure farm products bearing the logo are indeed Alaska grown. Some say the state was granted the logo itself. The state's lawsuit was filed after the Mat-Su Farm Bureau chapter applied for federal trademark rights to the logo. While this incensed folks at the state Division of Agriculture, the Farm Bureau group argues it only made the application when the division failed to police knock-offs of the logo. A division representative has denied that charge, claiming the chapter was impatient in its demands, and the state was dealing with illegal distributors.

At stake is a tidy sum of money earned - and I do mean earned - by the Mat-Su chapter and future income based on sales of non-food items bearing the logo.

When I say "tidy," that's by modest standards. Mat-Su Farm Bureau brought in a record gross profit of more than $65,000 at the recent Alaska State Fair in Palmer. A recent injunction forced the Farm Bureau chapter to turn over its profits because the chapter is allegedly making money on a logo it does not own. Instead, the state thinks it should have money it did not earn.

Despite some posturing and the trademark application, the Alaska Farm Bureau makes no particular claim on the Alaska Grown logo. The Mat-Su chapter maintains it has the same claim to the logo as any of the other farm groups in the state. Its purpose for filing for the trademark was to protect the logo from those who would profit from it. The chapter is a nonprofit and uses funds earned to benefit the industry. It sells Alaska Grown T-shirts and sweatshirts to raise money for agricultural marketing efforts, farmland preservation, agricultural literacy and scholarships.

Even folks at the Division of Agriculture would tell you the state spends less than it would like for ag marketing and education.

It makes sense for the state to ensure any other use of the logo is restricted to that which promotes Alaska agriculture. It doesn't make sense for the state, through endless legal wrangling, to financially crush a farm organization that has been working hard - perhaps harder than the state itself - to promote local agriculture. It is counterproductive to a struggling industry and smacks of vindictiveness.

The state has wasted thousands of dollars it could have used to promote agriculture, help the dairy industry or bolster agricultural literacy. The chapter has spent thousands of dollars it could ill afford and is threatened with loss of its profits from the Alaska Grown sales for years past - money already spent on the promotion of agriculture and defense of the lawsuit.

In the face of this travesty, the politicians - from the governor on down - dodge the ball, letting lawyers pass it back and forth instead of intervening with a just and reasonable solution outside the courtroom. Without such intervention, this wanton waste of resources will become another of the disasters that have plagued Alaska's agriculture.

Dear Governor Palin,

I am sorry to see this happening.

This is a case where I had to remove myself from participation. My cousin, Mark Rempel, is a farmer and involved in the lawsuit. So, due to the conflict, I delegated all of my authority to Mr. Tillery. The attorney Tillery assigned to actually working the case for the State of Alaska is a Mr. Steve Ross in our Anchorage office. If you, or anyone from your office needs to talk about the legal status, details or policy decisions behind the case they should call Mr. Ross at 269-5278. I cannot be directly involved in this matter because of the conflict.

Governor-

We are going to have Commissioner Irwin or Dick LaFever respond to this.

FYI

State works against farmers

Published on Thursday, October 18, 2007 10:27 PM AKDT

This is a message to Gov. Sarah Palin.

Your picture appeared on the front page of the Anchorage Daily News Oct. 15. You were wearing the Alaska Grown patch, sporting the logo you are suing the farmers for.

While supporting more tax on oil and gas, you are suing the farmers who produce a sustainable product for the state. Not only are the farmers being sued for their interest in promoting Alaska Grown, but you recently appointed Franci Havemeister as director to the Division of Agriculture. The only qualification she brought to the job was that she was your high school buddy. You passed up many more qualified people to choose her.

I thought the last administration was bad about appointing good ol' boys. Is it good ol' girls now? Franci didn't even know what the Plant Materials Center was when she became director, and I notice that you have zeroed the Plant Materials Center out of the budget for next year. It happens to be the single most important source of quality seed stock in the state and the single most important resource for farmers.

Wow, you really know how to cripple the farming industry in this state! Suppose you "win" the lawsuit against the farmers who have done so much to support Alaska Grown and make it popular. Without help and support from the farmers, the logo will probably wither and die because we will promote something else and make it popular too. What a shame! I can't wait for the public to learn that the Division of Agriculture has sent and received 45,000 e-mails condemning or concerning Alaska Grown.

Matanuska Maid and the state are directly responsible 100 percent for the failure of dairy farmers at Point MacKenzie. Yet you spend hundreds of thousands of state dollars to save Mat Maid, even though it is selling mostly Outside milk. I hope that you wear your logo with pride, as you have already caused Alaska farmers much grief with your lawsuit. You can't strong-arm us if we choose to abandon the promotion of Alaska Grown, and the logo won't be the same even if you do "win" the lawsuit. The agricultural community has already suffered losses of about $100,000 in legal fees to defend the logo. That amount makes the division's efforts even smaller because the Division of Agriculture has done nothing for farmers, nor do I expect it ever to with the contentious climate that now exists.

Dear Governor Palin,

I am sorry to see this happening.

This is a case where I had to remove myself from participation. My cousin, Mark Rempel, is a farmer and involved in the lawsuit. So, due to the conflict, I delegated all of my authority to Mr. Tillery. The attorney Tillery assigned to actually working the case for the State of Alaska is a Mr. Steve Ross in our Anchorage office. If you, or anyone from your office needs to talk about the legal status, details or policy decisions behind the case they should call Mr. Ross at 269-5278. I cannot be directly involved in this matter because of the conflict.

Governor-

At issue is the lawsuit over the Alaskan Grown logo. State claims ownership of the logo -

the Mat-Su chapter of the Alaska Farm Bureau tried to get a federal patent for it. Here is an article and an editorial from the Frontiersman that gives the history-

The question is at the heart of a lawsuit between the Alaska Department of Agriculture and the Mat-Su Chapter of the Alaska Farm Bureau. In a court decision handed down Monday, a judge found the state would suffer irreparable harm if the Mat-Su chapter proceeded with its attempt to get a federal trademark on the Alaska Grown logo.

The lawsuit began in February 2006 and this week's injunction came just days before the Alaska State Fair, where the Mat-Su Chapter of the Alaska Farm Bureau has a booth selling items emblazoned with the Alaska Grown logo.

The Alaska Grown program was started in 1986, according to the Alaska Grown Web site. Its logo was a creation of the Alaska Division of Agriculture and the Alaska Farmers and Stockgrowers Association. The Stockgrowers Association became the Alaska Farm Bureau. The logo is both a marketing tool and a certification mark that indicates food bearing the logo is produced by farmers who are a part of the program. Sweatshirts and stickers with the logo are marketing tools and so are not required to be produced in Alaska.

The farm marketing industry in Alaska is a $52 million business and Assistant Attorney General Steven Ross said that historically the state has allowed nonprofit farm organizations to use the logo for promotional purposes. The logo is used primarily on clothing the organizations sell and use for fundraising.

The state's position is that the state owns the Alaska Grown logo, Ross said. That means the Mat-Su Farm Bureau chapter cannot trademark what the state owns.

"It is a symbol of the Alaska Grown Program," Ross said, adding the Alaska Grown system was in place for nearly 20 years without problem.

Ross said the issue began in 2005 when the Mat-Su chapter tried to register the logo with the federal patent office.

The state asked representatives of the Mat-Su chapter to withdraw the federal trademark attempt and the Mat-Su Chapter refused, Ross said. The logo is registered with the state, but not at the federal level. If the Mat-Su federally trademarked the logo the state could loose control of how the logo is used.

"The state has rights in that logo and it has to protect the other people involved in the Alaska Grown program," Ross said.

The state has terminated the right for the Mat-Su Chapter to use the Alaska Grown logo and Monday's court finding grants a motion for injunctive relief, which is what the state requested, Ross said.

Politicians play dodgeball as ag industry bleeds

Published on Thursday, October 11, 2007 10:00 PM AKDT

The state and Mat-Su Chapter of the Alaska Farm Bureau seem no closer to settling a lawsuit hobbling an already shaky agriculture industry.

The Alaska Grown logo - the familiar, friendly green, yellow and blue emblem - should be fused to a large playground ball as every politician in the state is playing dodgeball with it.

The issue is ownership of the logo - who can use and profit from its use.

Advertisement

Few people outside the ag industry seem to understand the fierce tug-of-war over the logo. It's not surprising. There's been plenty of misinformation and accusations flying around.

There is also some agreement.

In the 1980s, a group of Alaska farmers and ranchers, and employees from various state and federal agencies, met to brainstorm ways to promote Alaska agriculture. Out of that meeting came the Alaska Grown logo, trademarked in 1985.

The agreement ends there.

Some say the state was chosen as caretaker of the logo. It was the state's job to ensure farm products bearing the logo are indeed Alaska grown. Some say the state was granted the logo itself. The state's lawsuit was filed after the Mat-Su Farm Bureau chapter applied for federal trademark rights to the logo. While this incensed folks at the state Division of Agriculture, the Farm Bureau group argues it only made the application when the division failed to police knock-offs of the logo. A division representative has denied that charge, claiming the chapter was impatient in its demands, and the state was dealing with illegal distributors.

At stake is a tidy sum of money earned - and I do mean earned - by the Mat-Su chapter and future income based on sales of non-food items bearing the logo.

When I say "tidy," that's by modest standards. Mat-Su Farm Bureau brought in a record gross profit of more than $65,000 at the recent Alaska State Fair in Palmer. A recent injunction forced the Farm Bureau chapter to turn over its profits because the chapter is allegedly making money on a logo it does not own. Instead, the state thinks it should have money it did not earn.

Despite some posturing and the trademark application, the Alaska Farm Bureau makes no particular claim on the Alaska Grown logo. The Mat-Su chapter maintains it has the same claim to the logo as any of the other farm groups in the state. Its purpose for filing for the trademark was to protect the logo from those who would profit from it. The chapter is a nonprofit and uses funds earned to benefit the industry. It sells Alaska Grown T-shirts and sweatshirts to raise money for agricultural marketing efforts, farmland preservation, agricultural literacy and scholarships.

Even folks at the Division of Agriculture would tell you the state spends less than it would like for ag marketing and education.

It makes sense for the state to ensure any other use of the logo is restricted to that which promotes Alaska agriculture. It doesn't make sense for the state, through endless legal wrangling, to financially crush a farm organization that has been working hard - perhaps harder than the state itself - to promote local agriculture. It is counterproductive to a struggling industry and smacks of vindictiveness.

The state has wasted thousands of dollars it could have used to promote agriculture, help the dairy industry or bolster agricultural literacy. The chapter has spent thousands of dollars it could ill afford and is threatened with loss of its profits from the Alaska Grown sales for years past - money already spent on the promotion of agriculture and defense of the lawsuit.

In the face of this travesty, the politicians - from the governor on down - dodge the ball, letting lawyers pass it back and forth instead of intervening with a just and reasonable solution outside the courtroom. Without such intervention, this wanton waste of resources will become another of the disasters that have plagued Alaska's agriculture.

I thought the last administration was bad about appointing good ol' boys. Is it good ol' girls now? Franci didn't even know what the Plant Materials Center was when she became director, and I notice that you have zeroed the Plant Materials Center out of the budget for next year. It happens to be the single most important source of quality seed stock in the state and the single most important resource for farmers:

Wow, you really know how to cripple the farming industry in this state! Suppose you "win" the lawsuit against the farmers who have done so much to support Alaska Grown and make it popular. I hope that you wear your logo with pride, as you have already caused Alaska farmers much grief with your lawsuit. You can't strong-arm us if we choose to abandon the promotion of Alaska Grown, and the logo won't be the same even if you do "win" the lawsuit. The agricultural community has already suffered losses of about $100,000 in legal fees to defend the logo. That amount makes the division's efforts even smaller because the Division of Agriculture has done nothing for farmers, nor do I expect it ever to with the contentious climate that now exists.

S The corrosion issue is great politics, but difficult administration. The corrosion issue was already fixed in the PPT law by making the first $.30 per BOE capital costs non-deductible. This was in lieu of the corrosion costs. This is easy to administer. Instead, adjust this figure.

S The bill provides for more information sharing between DOR and DNR. This is good. However, the joint administration proposed is unnecessary.

S I recommend no changes because PPT was a great upheaval. Now, you should focus on stability to attract investments. Wait until 2011 before changes are considered.

S The economics of business investment are more important than government take and responding to corruption.

S I applaud the administration's efforts to beef up the auditing.

S Although the PPT and aggregation did not put Alaska in the category of a banana republic, another significant change would do so—especially for political purposes. It was 16 years since the previous major change. Wait until 2011. You don't have any good information yet upon which to make a dramatic change that will last for another 15 years.

Johnston is up now.

Senator Ellis

s I can't believe Pedro is before us. He was inconsistent between his private memos and his public testimony. I take his testimony with a grain of salt.

Pedro

s Recommend no changes to PPT. Except transparency provisions.

s In original PPT, review provision in 2011. Wait until then.

s Goal of PPT: lower government take on more expensive fields, incentivizing them to increase production.

s The current system is designed to be sensitive to costs and to be price progressive.

§ PPT credits encourage investments by new investors in new oil and gas exploration and development and to encourage re-investment by existing companies.

§ The main goal is to reduce the decline of production.

§ My previous personal opinion was well documented in writing, and it differed from Governor Murkowski's goal. I have been perfectly consistent.

§ My previous recommendations should be implemented:

○ 25/20

○ Eliminate clawback provision that rewards a company for past investments. (Delete the transitional investment expenditures credit.)

○ I recommended a combination gross and net: a price progressive feature based on gross in addition to the 25¢ PPT rate.

○ Gross Revenue Exclusion for pipeline gas of 64% of the gross value of the prior to the application of the PPT for gas other than from Cook Inlet. Gas that needs to be transported over long distances has very different economics than oil.

○ I previously warned you of strong price escalations.

○ Audit before you conclude that there have been significant price increases.

○ The 10¢ floor is a political sham. I strongly recommend against this. It turns the PPT into a tax that is essentially ring-fenced for the large fields. It also removes the benefits of promoting reinvestment by the large companies.

Loved your column last week re: ACES mission to allow more info to/from companies, and to/from state departments.

I've been plagiarizing (not really - I'm giving you full credit) as we engage in these ACES town hall meetings with my reading of your column.

I don't think Alaskans were aware that state law was the enabler in this lack of communication problem between DNR and DOR. Thanks for doing a better job of pointing that out than we've been able to do.

Sincerely,

Subject: JNU Chamber Invite

After the AOGA presentation today the executive director of JNU Chamber (Cathie Roemmich) came up to let me know that the gasline team is invited to speak at JNU Chamber on Thursday, November 1 (two Thursdays from today) on ACES. Cathie will get in touch with Joe if the administration is interested and/or has time to attend.

Kara Moriarty (deputy director of AOGA) showed a couple Revenue slides in her presentation and handed out AOGA fliers that quote Pat Galvin saying "Frankly, we have not said that ACES improves the investment climate. Clearly, there is going to be a larger state share and that isn't going to make the economics of projects better."

On a positive note, several good questions were asked. Murray Walsh spoke up, as did a couple others from the audience that were pro-administration and pro reviewing the current tax structure. One lady even said after a comment from Kara "it's erroneous to ask if private business owners want to be taxed 64% when oil companies aren't even taxed 64%"

The AOGA flier is attached.

Hi Cathie,

It was great to see you this week.

I saw that the deputy director of AOGA is speaking at the Juneau Chamber luncheon today. I hope Governor Palin's gasoline team would also be invited to speak to your members in the near future to talk about ACES. The AOGA executive director is on record in opposition of changing the tax structure and it would be helpful, I think, for Juneau residents to hear both sides of the argument. Perhaps they've already been invited?

Thanks for your time,

Ivy

Governor,

I just spoke with David Keane who indicates that Martin Houston will speak with you whenever you wish to call today. David simply asked me to advise him at what time you intend to make the call so that he can ensure Martin is prepared to step out of corporate board meetings to take the call. Therefore, whatever time works for you is fine, just let me know and I'll get that information to BG.

David also said you should expect Martin to request a personal meeting with you. Martin will propose that he, Betsy Spomer and David Keane travel to meet with you personally next Thursday or Friday (October 25th or 26th) in Juneau, or whatever location might work for you. I believe Martin wants this meeting to ensure you are not upset with BG for making this decision to not participate in the AGIA process. This reinforces my belief that this is a long-shot, but I believe it is worth the effort.

I hope you received the e-mail I sent last night with the contact and background information. If you did not, I will send it again.

Thanks Governor,

Marty
